COLD WEATHER HORSE CARE REVIEW

Winter has an icy grip on most of the United States, and with even sunny Florida facing record freezing temperatures, horse owners across the country need to keep a close eye on their herds to prevent cold-weather related ailments.

In cold weather, horse owners should be thinking, “water, water, water,” said Jean T. Griffiths, extension horse specialist at Cornell University in Ithaca, NY.

Water is essential for regulating body temperature, said Greg Meyer, extension educator for large animals at Ohio State University. “We typically think of keeping horses cool with water, but water is required for energy for keep them warm as well.”

If you don't have a water heater to prevent pails or tubs from freezing, Griffiths suggested bringing warm water from the house to keep water unfrozen for a longer period of time. Warmer water can also encourage horses to drink more. “Nobody in these temperatures would want to drink 32 degree water,” Meyer said.

Horses will also need more hay as they expend more energy trying to keep warm. “You want to make sure they have plenty of hay, but remember you're going to need more water as you increase the amount of dry matter going through their GI tract to avoid colic and impaction,” said Griffiths.

When frigid temperatures set in, many owners immediately pack their animals into barns and reach for blankets to help their horses ward off the chill, but in some cases these steps can do more harm than good. “Even though you're trying to be nice to horses by closing them up in buildings, a lot of barns might not have the best ventilation,” said Meyer. “From a health perspective, the more you close animals in, the more likely that sickness can spread.”

If you do keep your horses stabled, Meyer recommends improving ventilation by leaving a door or window that is out of the wind open. According to Griffiths, most horses will do well in a covered three-sided shed, which allows them to get out of the wind. “Horses can deal with the cold, but they can't deal with the wind,” she said.

As for blanketing, Karen Waite, equine extension specialist at Michigan State University, said “often it's unwarranted.” Horses are pretty well designed to keep warm provided they have a full coat and a body condition score of five or higher,” she explained.

If you do choose to blanket your horse, Waite recommended checking the blanket regularly for dampness. “If they get soaked through, hypothermia can become an issue,” she said.

Meyer concluded, “This is all common sense stuff that we sometimes forget because we're trying to deal with the cold ourselves.”

OFFERED FOR SALE: Gingerly Dun
3 YO Mare - Reg. POAC (Blue papers) & Pending Registry with IQPA
Bay with Dun Factors - has approved characteristics for POA and starting to roan

Foaled: March 2, 2006

Sire: Dun Up Snappy (Owned by Todd & Missy Corn)

Dam: KS'S Ghostly Lady

Asking: $4500.00 (Will also consider lease option)

For more information contact: Tyra at 217-251-6205 (anytime) or t_raisner@yahoo.com OR Sarah at 217-251-4501 (evenings only).

We also have two additional POA ponies for sale - please call or email for more info

This mare is ready for a new youth rider. Her accomplishments for the 2009 IL State Fair: 6th in 2/3yo Training, 8th in Pony HMS, 10th in Pony Conformation - and she's only a 3 year old! Her accomplishments for the 2009 Clark County 4H Show: Grand Champion in Pony Halter, Training class, & Int. HMS with Reserve in Int. SMS! Current on vacs, Coggins, dental, farrier. No vices, bad habits, lameness issues. Excellent ground manners, pivots, sidepasses, even trail rides! Have started riding her in a snaffle & working on English. Ginger is easy to ride, not complicated at all, will need consistency to maintain training she's already had. Would love for her to go to a good show home for a youth with experience. Videos/pics available. Price will increase with additional training and when she colors enough for permanent POA registration. Her full siblings have all colored and are being shown POAC as excellent all-around ponies.

2005 APHA Gray Overo Gelding – Pretty Blue Sky

This pretty boy is an all around prospect. With very limited showing, he has an ROM in Jr HUS. Ben stands 16'2 hands and is in the Breeders Trust. He won the IPHC 2YO HUS Futurity and was reserve in the 2YO WP. He is very versatile and has been started in showmanship and the pattern classes. Ben has been brought along slowly and is ready to hit the road! Suitable for youth or amateur. Ben is a great mover with a big stride, very talented & good minded.
